Faction: The Fated

(The Takers)

Like the name implies, the Takers believe in grabbing whatever's available to be grabbed. If you're strong enough to take something, you deserve to have it, whether it's a bag of gold or a pile of respect. Don't sit around and whine about a bad break! Get off your duff and make yourself into a success (after all, no one else will).

Hurst Barris

(The Indeps)

Indeps believe that no one has a lock on the truth. They're looking for the truth, but they're not going to subscribe blindly to any philosophy. In fact, they feel it's unlikely that there's any overarching truth, but they're always willing to help someone find his personal answer.

Faction: Society of Sensation
(The Sensates)

The Sensates believe that the universe is ruled by the senses, that it can only be known through the senses, through experiencing as many different sensations as possible. Some folks think that the Sensates are all hedonists, but they're not. Sensates look for the subtlety of life as well. Hedonism is for amateurs.

(The Madmen)

The Madmen believe that the multiverse makes no sense, that nothing you can do makes a bit of difference—life is nothing but a worthless struggle. The only true meaning comes from within, and that's the only place you should look for answers. Sometimes a Bleaker gets so overwhelmed by futility that he refuses to act at all, even to save the life of a friend.
